OUR business last season was most satisfactory. Having disposed of our seed and floral business, we were able to devote our whole time to the nursery department, and the results surpassed our highest expectations. Not only were we able to handle a larger volume of business, but we were able to increase our plantings, with the result that we have to offer this season the finest and best assorted lot of ornamental stocks to be found in the Southwest.

The recent general rains have put the ground in fine condition for planting nursery stock. Planters would do well to place their orders early before the best stock is gone, as indications are that the demand for trees will be heavy this season, and the supply is not extra heavy as a rule.

WHY BUY FROM US. In addition to giving better stock than is offered by most other nurserymen, we think we can sell good stock cheaper than others, because we do not employ agents or solicitors in any capacity. We do not publish an expensive catalogue and do not maintain an expensive city office, but grow our own trees on our own land, and sell only for cash, thus eliminating much of the usual overhead expense and heavy losses from bad accounts. In this way we can give our customers the benefit of these advantages in reduced prices and better stock.

OUR GUARANTEE. We guarantee to send out healthy trees, true to name and free from disease, and if we fail in this we stand ready, upon proper proof, to replace such stock, or refund the purchase price, but we do not hold ourselves liable for an amount greater than the original price. BUT WE DO NOT GUARANTEE STOCK TO LIVE. We are unwilling to be responsible for improper planting, handling and cultivation; for drouths, freezes, bad soil, insects, rabbits, diseases or anything else that might prevent a tree from growing.

If goods are not accepted on these conditions they must be returned at once. Not in one case out of ten is the nurseryman responsible for the failure of trees to grow, and for this reason we are unwilling to assume any responsibility.

We are always glad to have visitors. The street car line is now being built to Riverside and will doubtless come close to our nursery. It will probably be in operation before the season is far advanced.

TERMS: Cash with order. We deliver our trees in good condition to the transportation companies, but do not give any guarantee as to their safe delivery or as to their growing. All prices f. o. b. Fort Worth.

RELIABILITY. We are members of the American Association of Nurserymen, and no one can obtain or retain membership in it who is not honorable and fair in his dealings. Address

NESS BERRY

A cross between our native dewberry and the red raspberry. Promises to be to Texas what the loganberry is to the Northwest. Plant vigorous and hardy. Fruit dark red. Very large and of delicious flavor. Makes jam equal to that of the red raspberry. Developed by Prof. H. Ness of the A. & M. College. A few plants sent us by Prof. Ness three years ago have borne three good crops, but on account of the dry summer we have not been able to propagate many plants. To those who wish to test this interesting fruit we will sell a few plants at 35 cents each. Next season we hope to have a good stock of them.

Ornamentals

We have a larger acreage and greater variety of ornamental trees than ever before. When car load lots of evergreens, shade and shrubs are needed it is always best to come to the nursery and pick out the trees. We make a specialty of supplying parks, cemeteries, subdivisions and large estates. In car lots the freight and packing are much cheaper, and we can sell at a lower price in quantities. In addition to what is offered in the following list, we have some specimens of much larger sizes, for quick effects in landscape planting. We can also furnish a few each of many kinds not listed.

Evergreens

Styles in landscape work are changing just as they do in architecture, dress, etc. Just now evergreens are all the go. Especially is this true in the North and on the Pacific Coast, where fine landscape work is more in evidence than it is in the Southwest. Here we have had to overcome the prejudice in the minds of some that evergreens have a "grave-yardy" effect. This prejudice is also due to the fact that only the commoner kinds of arbor-vitae and cedars have been used. Another reason for their unpopularity is that people have tried to grow the kinds seen in the North, such as firs, spruces, rhododendrons and other kinds wholly unsuited to our soils and climate. But the truth is we have more and prettier evergreens that thrive here than they have in the North or East. In our nursery at present we have more than one hundred different kinds growing successfully, and this list is being added to every year as we try new ones. Just as fast as we can work up sufficient stock of the new kinds they will be offered. We are offering several new kinds this season. All the evergreens listed below, both broad leaf and conifers, are growing luxuriantly in our nursery at Fort Worth and that too during the last two or three extremely hot and dry summers.

Another cause of failure is that heretofore it was the custom to plant evergreens bare rooted, just as you do a tree. But this should never be done except with the Chinese Arbor vitae, the Euonymus and some of the other broad-leaf evergreens. The way to handle evergreens successfully is to move them with a ball of earth around the roots, securely held by burlap—"balled" as we call it. In this way even trees 15 to 18 feet high can be moved successfully. The foliage of evergreens should be sprinkled every day or two during the first season. The roots should be watered once a week. If these directions are observed, evergreens may be grown with as much success as shade trees.

There are two distinct classes of evergreens, namely Broad-leafed and Conifers. Many of the broad-leafed are good bloomers, such as the Magnolias, Cape Jasmines, Abelia and some of the Ligustrums.

These are useful for massing, for hedges and as individual specimens. The conifers may be used as individual specimens, or in groups on the lawn, for street planting and also for massing. The proper use of the finer evergreens as foundation plantings around the house, will produce the very finest results, and this is the class of work that is certain to become very popular. Already many people are taking out their old shrubs that have grown too large and ragged, and in their places are setting the many colored junipers, cypresses, arbor vitae, pines, etc., or the various broad-leaves such as euonymus, abelia, ligustrum nepalense, etc. With a proper use of evergreens the beds will look pretty the year round, and especially is this appreciated in winter when everything else looks bleak and bare.

Roses

Roses should be planted extensively where they will do well, but they should not be attempted unless the conditions are just right. The rose is worth nearly all other flowers combined where it succeeds properly, but unless it can be grown successfully, there are bitter disappointments in store for the planter. In the first place roses are very selfish. They do not want anything else growing near them. They do best on new ground, preferably any heavy rich native soil, whether black or red, though they do splendidly on sandy soil if the clay is not more than two or three feet below the surface. They should be planted in a solid bed by themselves out in the full sunlight, though they may be put on the east or west side of a building or fence. Do not plant them on the north, and especially avoid planting them near trees, shrubs or vines. And where roses have been growing successfully a number of years, they should not be planted in the same soil again. Better make a new bed in the back yard or wherever an open place can be found that has no roots of trees nearby. If such a place cannot be found then give up trying to grow roses, and plant shrubs or evergreens. Roses are valuable only for the blossoms they produce. They are useless as a shrub, hence they should not be planted around the house, or in any other locality where a shrub effect is desired. Climbing roses, however, may be planted around the porch if desired, but it is even better to plant these on trellises.

While roses are great feeders, it is the safer plan not to use any fertilizer the first season. After they have made one or two season's growth and are well established, it is beneficial to put two or three inches of stable manure on the ground in November and leave it there all winter. In the spring it may be spaded in. Much of the so-called "dairy loam" that is sold is a light porous chaffy soil that often does more harm than good, especially where it is applied in the spring. Bush roses require a good pruning every year or two, but this should not be done here until the end of February. If pruned early the young growth starts too soon and may be killed by the late freezes. Climbing roses must not be pruned, except to remove unhealthy or undesired wood. The blossoms of climbing roses comes from the previous season's growth, and if you cut this off, you cut off your crop of blooms.

Only everblooming varieties should be planted in this climate. In the North most of the everbloomers will not stand the severe winters, and so they have to use the hardier annual flowering kinds. It is also a mistake to try to grow too many kinds. Too many varieties are selected on account of the color or perhaps the blooms are pretty, never taking into consideration that the plant may be a weak grower and a poor bloomer. For best results, it is well to confine your plantings largely to the varieties that bear an abundance of the largest and prettiest blossoms, full and double on long stems, and are strong vigorous growers and free from mildew and other diseases. Such a combination of good qualities can be found in the Pink Radiance, Red Radiance, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Lady Hillingdon, White Cochet, Pink Cochet and a few others. A solid bed of any one of the above varieties will look prettier than any bed of mixed varieties. Our plants this year were grown thin on the ground, and we believe are the finest we have ever had. There are practically none of the lighter number two grade, but are strong number ones, and perhaps one-half of them are the extra heavy grade. They are now (October 20) standing 3½ to 4 feet high in the nursery row, with several branches as thick as one's thumb. We have never offered better values than we offer now. They will be ready to dig about November 20 to 25, but orders should be sent in now, to insure getting what you want.
